Cosmati - Tarum GR

Muted, monochromatic looks were seen en masse at Cersaie this year. And, even though Mosaic specialist Sicis introduced its laser-cut marble. Cosmati, two years ago, it continues to be strong and trend. The Cosmati Tarum GR bathroom floor mosaic (left) is right on track.sicis.com

Photocatalysis

SICIS^{Green}★ glass mosaic collections containing Titanium Dioxide in the proper crystalline form (anatase) have been tested and proven having photocatalytic activity on 100% of the mosaic surface.

Photocatalytic activity signifies the following inherent properties; anti microbial, anti mold, anti fungus - What you see

Naturally abates noxious gases improving air quality - What you don't see

Look for the SICIS^{Green}★ on the majority of our glass mosaics!

These characteristics can contribute to LEED certification.

Photocatalytic activity can contribute 1 credit to the LEED credit, Innovation in Design IEQc4.3 is the LEED credit for flooring systems (Indoor Environmental Quality credit 4.3 - Flooring Systems).

Most SICIS products are free of integral organic-based coatings and sealants, comply with LEED requirements for hard surface flooring and therefore may contribute to this credit. All other SICIS products are undergoing Floorscore certification for compliance with the referenced green building rating systems.
